

GENERATION LOCKDOWN.

A unique, national writing competition has begun, called 'Generation Lockdown.' You have the opportunity to write about your experience of life in lockdown. Your writing could take the shape of a story, or a poem, or even a personal experience told however you like. Once submitted, it will then be read by a published author, who will select the best five from your age category.

Winning stories will be included in a published book called 'Generation Lockdown Writes' and prizes will be awarded. You will also have a chance to meet the authors who read your work.

All money raised from purchased books will go to The BookTrust charity.

So get writing! The only rules are that your piece must be no longer than 700 words, you must be at least seven years old and it must be submitted in your age category.

The deadline is Friday 17th July and full details and how to submit your piece can be found on this website:
